Dr. Holyoke is the pestor of a church which, under his leadership, has been very successful in work along so-called "institutional" lines. Dr. Holyoke prefers the word special as describing this work imtional" lines. Dr. Holyoke prefers the word social as describing this work, implying as it does the church's duty to the rommunity and the individual along lines of social service. To his mind an institutional of social church must be an open church, open seven days in the week; a ministering church it must be if it remains open; and a free church, and because free, a liberal church. Some of the results of this sort of endeavor are: It uses the church, the plant is not idie the results of this sort of endeavor are: It uses the church, the plant is not idle six days in the week; it restores to the church its position as a centre of community life; it enlarges the circle of the church's usefulness and the circle of its fellowship; and it develops volunteer service along many heipful lines. The address was delightfully delivered and was most helpful and suggestive.
